I am using OpenMP to parallelize a code written in Qt. The code is relatively simple. I am using multiple threads. I don't know why, but most of the errors I see in the console have to do with memory and malloc. For example: the program crashes when trying to allocate space for the arrays m_mesh and m_count in the constructor. the program crashes when trying to allocate space for the array m_coords in the constructor. the program crashes when trying to allocate space for the array m_coords in the destructor. the program crashes when trying to allocate space for the array m_pos in the destructor. I had a similar problem in a simple C program which was solved by creating a runtime when using OpenMP. Is it the same case here? What am I doing wrong? I have searched the Qt docs and I didn't find anything about this. Thanks in advance.

A: So I've been able to solve my problem by using the following code, which has been taken from Qt Documentation (and openmp.h):

```
int main(int argc, char argv) { // Use OpenMP here to parallelize this application.
    int num_threads = omp_get_max_threads();
    #pragma omp parallel {
        int n = omp_get_num_threads();
        #pragma o
```
